Nez Perce Tourism Celebrates Grand Opening

The Lewis-Clark Discovery Center hosted the grand opening celebration for Nez Perce Tourism on Friday, March 29, 2019.

The event had a traditional ribbon cutting and hosted drummers, dancers, and cultural experts who told stories about the Nimiipuu culture.

Nez Perce Tourism was created with approval and blessings of tribal elders. It will be a way to keep the community updated on events involving Nez Perce and provide a way to help visitors learn about Nimiipuu culture from tribal members.

Stacia Morfin, CEO of Nez Perce Tourism, is set to open this spring and summer with jet boat tours and three-day historical tours around the region. Morfin was aided by several local tourism establishments to move forward a little more than a year ago.

"I am proud to say tourism is not new to our nation. Historically, and from this day forward, people will be reminded that we have and always will be known for our vast connection to the land in which we originated from," Morfin said, "guiding and sharing our wisdom is in our DNA. I am privileged to witness our ancestors moving. I know with my whole heart they are the drivers of Nez Perce Tourism, anyone who was at the opening ceremony could feel it." For more information, you can visit Nez Perce Tourism on facebook, or visit nezpercetourism.com.

Titwáatit (Story): Blast From the Past “A Journey of Man & Salmon”

The following piece was written by Art Broncheau. This Spring marks the 10-year anniversary of its publication in the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's 'Eddies: Reflection on Fisheries Conservation'. Art is a current Nez Perce Tribal Executive Committee Member, and previously worked as a Fish Culturalist at the Kooskia National Fish Hatchery on the Clearwater River.

My grandmother used to tell me, "Always remember where you come from, because if you forget - you will get lost." My life has been like that of the salmon - I knew I was supposed to live in another place, but along the way I got lost in a dark ocean. If I was to survive, I needed to find my true home. But it was a long and hazardous journey.

I am Nimi'ipuu ... a Nez Perce. I was born and raised on the Oregon Umatilla Reservation. I learned the importance of salmon to the Nez Perce people from my grandfather and uncles by fishing on the Columbia River at the historic Celilo Falls. The Dalles Dam flooded that place in 1957. Monuments there now mark the inundated villages, the gathering places and the lost way of life. I remember the aroma of the fish, the sounds of roaring falls and the busy camps where hundreds of Indian families from different tribes came and fished. I often started school a month late because of our traditional cycles of salmon fishing, huckleberry gathering, and deer hunting.

My mother - also Nimi'ipuu - shared with me stories of her childhood in the Clearwater River region of Idaho, about the Nez Perce culture, my family history, and our traditions. After high school, I continued my education in Kansas, and then moved to San Francisco in 1967. In two years there, I experienced a very different world of discordant political groups, war protests, hippies and First Amendment free-speech exercised. Much of the time I felt like I was swimming around, not belonging to any one group or movement. Like the young salmon in the sea, I was unaware at the time that I was growing and learning from these experiences, being nurtured and surviving. Yet these were some of the darkest years of my life. Many of my "brother fish" didn't survive their journey, and those who did wear deep scars, much like the battered adult salmon returning from their ocean life today. I knew I had to swim out of this ocean and find a better world. I needed to find my home, my mother's birthplace on the Clearwater River.

On my way home, I stopped once again to continue my schooling, as I had promised my grandmother years before. I entered the University of Oregon, earning a degree in sociology. I also had a baby girl to care for, which gave my life new purpose. I worked as a counselor and social worker because I felt it was my turn to help others, after having others pity and help me through my journey. Little did I know that my social work was preparing me for work in fisheries conservation.

The final bend in the river of my homeward journey began in 1997 when I came to work in Idaho as a field tech with the Nez Perce Tribal Fisheries Department. A year later, I transferred to the Coho Restoration Project on the Clearwater River, first at Idaho Fish and Game Department's Clearwater Hatchery, and then across the river at Dworshak National Fish Hatchery. Coho salmon had been declared extirpated from Idaho in 1986, and the Nez Perce Tribe wanted to bring these fish back. Salmon are sacred and salmon mean life for the Nez Perce people - if we lose them, we are lost as a people, a nation. This was our chance now to help the fish find their own way home. A cooperative agreement with the Nez Perce Tribe and Dworshak National Fish Hatchery makes possible the training of tribal fish culturists to rear coho salmon. The fish taught us a lot those first years. I figured if I could find my way back to the Clearwater after so many years away in the ocean, maybe the coho had a chance to come back home, too.

Through the Snake River Basin Adjudication of 2007, the Nez Perce Tribe assumed management of the Kooskia National Fish Hatchery. I finally reached my home here last spring after a long journey. Kooskia National Fish Hatchery sits on the site of the historic Chief Looking Glass village. In the 1870's hundreds of Nimi'ipuu lived peacefully here to avoid conflicts with the U.S. Army. Just as Chief Looking Glass kept his people safe, it is my job now to keep the young salmon safe. I pray to the Creator daily for strength in my legs, arms, and mind and for good health so that I can do my job well. When I'm at work on the ponds, I listen to the whispering winds in the trees. I look to the hills above the hatchery and hope the ancient ones are proud of what I'm doing to conserve our fisheries and preserve our Nez Perce past.

To me, the future of the coho salmon is full of hope. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Nez Perce Tribe work well together for the future of fisheries in the Clearwater Basin. The trays inside Kooskia National Fish Hatchery are filled with fertile eggs in the fall, hatching salmon fry in the winter, and outside the ponds are full of smolts preparing for their own long journey to the ocean in the spring. My purpose now is to keep the fish cycle connected with nature for as long as I can.

I have come full-circle in my own life's journey, and like the fish spawning the next generation in the streams, I have years of knowledge for younger generations to learn. In conserving coho salmon, I can slow down. Think. Live. Like my grandmother told me to, I never forgot where I came from, it just took me a little longer to find my way home.

A Night at the Oscars Recognizes Nez Perce Tribe Staff

The Nez Perce Tribe (NPT) Executive Director's office organized an employee banquet on Saturday, March 23, 2019 at the Clearwater River Casino. This year's theme was 'A Night at the Oscars'. It was an evening of delicious food, employee recognition, and many laughs.

John Williamson, NPT Police Department Administrative Sergeant, was the official MC for the occasion. The MC introduced and welcomed different folks to the stage to present awards to the recipients. Awardees were then able to give a short speech, accepting their plaque.

The employee banquet was once an annual occasion, but has not occurred in about 12 years. "We used to do this all the time and people loved getting dressed up and spending time together so we decided it was time to bring it back," stated Rebecca Miles, NPT Executive Director.

The event was organized by a team of NPT staff, who did an excellent job of making all the arrangements. They also collaborated with Lapwai High School seniors to have the event in conjunction with senior project: Adult Prom. All were invited including staff, family, friends, and community members.

NPT staff had an opportunity to nominate NPT employees for each award. Afterward, nominees were collected and the three employees that received the most nominations were placed on the ballot. Staff were then able to cast their vote for the nominee they felt was most deserving. "This is another fun way for us to recognize our awesome employees," said Miles.

Awardees:

Lapwai & Kamiah Community Center Construction

Since December the Pi-Nee-Waus and Wa-A'Yas community centers have been under construction, while a remodeling project has been underway on the restrooms and locker rooms. Updates on the facilities have not been made since the community centers were constructed back in the 1960's.

As with any project, there have been some hiccups causing delays but your patience is greatly appreciated. Overall the work is progressing and the project is still set to have the Wa-A'Yas restrooms available for use during 2019 General Council May 2-4, 2019. Additionally, the delay has not increased the cost for the project.

This project will rebuild interior walls, ceiling, finishes, plumbing, HVAC, and electrical. It will also be bringing the restrooms up to date with ADA requirements. This includes handicap accessibility and family restrooms with a baby changing station.

Work is being completed by the National Native American Construction (NNAC) company. Josh Walker is the project manager for NNAC, collaborating with Ann McCormack, the project manager for the Nez Perce Tribe. Mike Walker is the site supervisor in Lapwai, Frank Schmitz is the site supervisor in Kamiah, and the project designer is Dan Whitaker with Womer & Associates out of Spokane, WA. "The company has been very cooperative with the entire project," stated Terry Kinder, Nez Perce Tribe construction planner and contact person for this project.

NNAC is a Native American owned business. The company has worked on several projects for the Tribe and on the reservation. For this project in particular, they have utilized TERO and created over 1500 hours of work at the TERO prevailing wage. This project has been fully funded by the Nez Perce Tribe, with SRBA funding. The anticipated complete wrap up of the project, will be at the end of April 2019.

Big Plans for Little Village Mobile Home Court

On February 15, 2019 the transaction was completed for the Nez Perce Tribe's purchase of the Little Village Mobile Home Court in Lapwai. Nez Perce Tribal Housing Authority (NPTHA) will manage and oversee the two-acre property, and they have big plans.

The first step with this property is clean up and trailer removal. Most of the trailers are outdated and are not considered livable. There is also vegetation overgrowth, and tree removal will need to occur. This process will be completed in phases in order to help relocate current tenants. It is anticipated to begin at the end of April 2019.

NPTHA is working closely with multiple tribal departments to assess housing needs in the area. Knowing of the vast needs, the primary focus will be on creating an environment of safe and sober living. "We are excited to be working with so many partners and the anticipated services that will be available following the completion of this project," stated Laurie Ann Cloud, NPTHA Executive Director.

There are different ideas that are being discussed amongst the planning team; NPTHA, 'Úuyit Kímti (New Beginnings), TANF, Veterans Office, Child Protection Services, Adult Protection, Healing to Wellness Court, and Nimiipuu Health Behavioral Health. Some thoughts are new manufactured home lots, rental apartments, supportive housing apartments, or tiny homes. Either way, there is a lot of potential and the team is determined to make this project a priority.

Rip City Nation Honors & Represents Lapwai's Past

8th Grade State at the Washington Basketball Tournament

The Rip City Nation basketball team has been successfully representing the Lapwai community and Nez Perce Tribe since 2014. The Team consists of two groups of players; the older group, ranging from 12-14 years of age, and the younger group, 8-12 years of age. They participate in almost all local tournaments and are traveling all over in Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and even Nevada. The players on both Rip City Nation teams have all grown up together, on and off of the court.

When asked how many games Rip City Nation has won, coach Ada McCormack-Marks stated she honestly has no clue, "...not even a ballpark answer because we have never kept track." The two teams have been exceling over the years, and their losses make them work even harder. Though they play in some big tournaments, the players enjoy playing in "rez tourneys" the most.

Lauren Gould, who has played for Coach Mc-

Cormack-Marks since her first practice, says she enjoys playing with her friends and calling them teammates. "Representing Lapwai is important," said Gould, "It is something we are always reminded about from our parents, coach, and community because we are proud to be Nez Perce." Her current goal, is to make the varsity team as a freshman at Lapwai High School, and to win the banner for the Idaho State Championship.

Jordyn McCormack-Marks, says her family keeps her motivated to have a good attitude and give her full effort each game. When her team wins' tournaments, she is proud of everyone. Jordyn looks up to her mom and would like to give a shout out to her parents who coach her, her grandma and Pooks for always supporting her and her sisters, and her teammates for being a part of Rip City Nation.

Skylin Parrish says she loves to play basketball and hopes the Lapwai community is proud of her and the Rip City Nation team, because they are all doing good things. Parrish feels like her team is able to bond and connect tightly which makes them play together as one. She would like to thank the community for cheering loud and proud for the team, and Ada and Chad for teaching the Rip City Nation team new things when they could be doing other stuff.

Rip City Nation's newest addition, Ama Creutzberg was asked by Coach McCormack-Marks to play Boys and Girls Club when she was ten years old. "My first practice was so hard, I was nervous," she said, "but I wanted to keep playing because my teammates were welcoming and my coach had patience to help me get better." Creutzberg's whole family supports her, but her Tutu's encourage her the most. "I feel proud to represent this community," she said, "I am proud to call my teammates my friends, and my friends my teammates. They have all helped me get better."

Both Rip City Nation teams recently won the Washington Basketball Championship Tournament in Spokane, WA on March 15-17; staying at the top of their brackets and remaining undefeated. The following week, the players adjusted from AAU State basketball to "rez ball", with their most recent tournament.

Rip City Nation traveled to Pendleton, OR during spring break to compete with other Natives in a tournament that promotes Basketball Against Alcohol & Drugs (B.A.A.D). Both teams came out on top. For the older team, Soa Moliga and Kendall Wallace each received All-Star awards, and Jordyn McCormack-Marks earned the MVP award. For the younger team, Skylin Parrish and Lexi Villavicencio received All-Star awards, and Jaelyn McCormack-Marks earned MVP. Rip City Nation now focuses

12-14 Age Girls, B.A.A.D Champions

9-11 Age Girls, B.A.A.D Champions

on their next tournament, their big hometown tourney, Play in Your Moccasins.

Over the years, the team has changed their name from Lapwai to Rip City. Adding "Nation" to the name, was about carrying on a legacy left behind by Coach McCormack-Marks' grandpa, Esky McCormack. Nez Perce Nation was a traveling basketball team, started in the 1950's by coach McCormack-Marks' great-grandpa, Harry Pete Fox McCormack. On the first team, Nez Perce Nation had players such as Lee Roy Seth, Charley Taylor, Art Reuben, Gary Broncheau, Kenny Broncheau, Badge, Cal Wilson, Ed Madsen, and Jimmy Arthur, just to name a few. On the younger Nez Perce Nation team, there were players such as Josh Leighton Jr, Felix McGo-wen, David "DC" Cunningham Jr, Johnson Leighton, James "Jambo" Matheny, Littlefoot Ellenwood, Bob Sobotta Jr, Greg "Spoon" Jose, Mike "Spider" Leslie, and Gem "Kota" Leighton. "I grew up watching my grandpa bring his team all over the Indian basketball circuit," said Coach McCormack-Marks, "I wanted my girls to have something of their grandpa to always be with them." Before Rip City Nation's games, they all yell "Nation!" just like the guys did for Nez Perce Nation.

McCormack-Marks would like to thank her husband for being a great supporter through all of her coaching years. "I know it hasn't been an easy task, me not being home until late during game nights, or being away on week-ends throughout the year," coach McCormack-Marks said, "but he makes it so much easier for me to do something I am passionate about." Coach McCormack-Marks would also like to thank her mom and grandma for supporting their granddaughters and traveling all over with them.

Shout out to all of the Rip City Nation girls and their families for being a part of the journey, "I hope they have enjoyed the ride just as much as I have and I can't wait to see what the future holds for all these girls," coach McCormack-Marks concluded.

LHS Seniors Organize Adult Prom for Senior Project

Two Lapwai High School Seniors organized an 'Adult Prom' for their senior project. The event took place on March 23, 2019 at the Clearwater River Casino. This year's theme was NightLightz and featured an assortment of music, spanning across the decades, and unique lighting on the dance floor. The night primarily consisted of dancing. As folks arrived they were completely dressed for the occasion. Some couples went all out with a tux and gown, corsage and boutonniere, and even unique prom-posal stories. Of course, the night could not be complete without selecting a prom King and Queen.

Congratulations to Randy and Hattie Brown on being selected as the 2019 Adult Prom

King and Queen. Prom prince and princess, and prom court were also awarded. The selection was completely random, with each guest entering their name into a drawing. Following selection, prom royalty shared a special dance just for them.

Kelani Smith, daughter of Antonio and Vestal Smith, and Jaylie Hillman, daughter of Jared and Kelly Hillman, decided to plan the event in an effort to raise funds for Business Professionals of America. The final total of funds raised has not yet been determined, but door sales alone were around $800. They also were taking photos and had a small charge for prints. Overall it was a success and attendees are looking forward to, hopefully, next year's prom.

Congratulations David "Di Di" Scott on retirement!

Thank you for your many years of dedication.

Tribe Purchases Zims Hot Springs

The Nez Perce Tribe (Tribe) is excited to announce its purchase of the well-known Zims Hot Springs (Hot Springs) located near New Meadows, Idaho. The Tribe purchased the property from long-time owner Allen Dixon on Friday, March 22, 2019. The Hot Springs will be temporarily closed while the Tribe completes necessary transitional requirements as the new owner. However, the Tribe anticipates that the Hot Springs will reopen soon.

The Hot Springs, located in the Tribe's aboriginal territory and once referred to as Chinook Meadows, have always been of cultural significance to the Tribe. The Nez Perce people used the Hot Springs for ceremonial and spiritual purposes. These natural springs were also used to fashion bows from the horns of bighorn sheep.

"This is an exciting opportunity for the Tribe. As the original people of this land, the Hot Springs and the entire area are an important part of our culture and history. In addition to the Tribe's Fisheries and Wildlife Departments in McCall, we look forward to continuing our stewardship in the area through management of this wonderful amenity," commented Shannon Wheeler, Nez Perce Tribe Executive Committee Chairman.

Dixon noted that his dad purchased the Hot Springs in 1976 and the family has been running it ever since. It features two outdoor pools fed by natural mineral water from an artesian well, cooled by the waters of the Little Salmon River. The pools are open year-round. The property also features a lodge, RV park, and campsites. "Thanks for the business after all these years and we want to wish the Tribe luck," stated Dixon.

Making Learning Fun for Parents & Children

The Kamiah Mamáy'asnim Hitéemenwees (Head Start) Family Engagement Team, in collaboration with the Nez Perce Tribe State Tribal Education Partnership (STEP) Program, recently hosted a Family Learning Series Training called "Ready Here I Come (Pre -K)." The Academic Development Institute in Lincoln and East St. Louis, IL, developed the curriculum.

The training is designed to help parents and families support their children's education at home and school. It also improves a pre-K child's readiness for Kindergarten. The class made learning fun for everyone! Participants learned skills within the context of play, everyday tasks, and preparation for school.

"Congratulations Kamiah Mamáy'asnim Hitéemenwees for your participation, commitment and dedication to complete the series," said Tess Woodward, STEP Family Engagement Specialist. "Working with the staff and families made the training fun and rewarding. Qe'ci Yew'Yew!"

The Kamiah participants who completed all three (3) workshops, facilitated by Tess Woodward, include Sapsis Moses (Teacher), Carmen Bullock (Parent), Perry Green (Teacher), Stella Penney (Parent), Lonnie Sammaripa, Jr. (Parent), Deleane McGowen (Community Member), Alethia Oatman (Staff), and Veda Pfefferkorn (Administration).

The Nez Perce STEP Program works with Family Engagement teams at Kamiah and Lapwai public schools and Head Start programs. The Family Learning Series covers topics to help families improve the education of their children in Pre-K, K-3, and K-12 grades.

Similar Family Learning Series classes were offered at Lapwai Mamáy'asnim Hitéemenwees and Lapwai Elementary School. Upcoming sessions are being finalized with the Kamiah School District.

If you are interested in hosting a Family Learning Series or joining a Family Engagement team in Kamiah and Lapwai, please contact Tess Woodward at (208) 621-4704. Qe'ci Yew'Yew
